GALLAGHER'S AN ARTIST.

TALKED RAILROADING IN A WAY TO MAKE YOUR HEAD SWIM.

Pid Make Lulu's Bosom Throb With Pride But Her Father Found Out That the Bold Passenger Engineer Was Only an Ash Shoveller in a Harlem Flat. Old Mr. Bennett himself says that Gallagher has phenomenal liar. Gallagher certainly is an artist in words. Gallagher is not exactly mething attractive about him. His eyes are rather good and his features are fairly reguant met Lulu Bennett. Lulu has a blushgrst met Lulu Bennett. Lulu has a blush-pes complexion and dark eyebrows which curve over full blue eyes. And she has the shitest teeth and roundest chin, which dimles just a little when she smiles. There is no doubt about it—she is handsome, and lagher recognized it as well as any one else. Mr. Bennett keeps a mission at the corner of 234th street and Second avenue. His long hair and flowing beard are snow white. His look is triarchal and benign, and be is truly good. To this good man's mission Gallagher fre-guently found his way. His saint was the old man's daughter, and she inclined her ear kindly and accepted his yowa. They were both mans dangeler, and and said means of the princip and accepted his vows. They were both by individually. Gallagher is 22 and Lullu almost id. He said he was an engineer, and had a run on the road." Now his "run" was to Chicago, now he took a "special" to Boston. Now he pulled "the Old Man's car" on a fiyning trip to Buffalo, and now the directors sent in aspecial request for "Gallagher and his per to suit them on a tour of inspection over the road and his running orders were "fifty miles and as much more as you can make with asfety." And when he "O. K.'d" the despatcher and swung into his cab his heart beat high with hope and the ugents of Lulu. He toid of times when he had faced death, with one hand you he lever and the other on the throttle, and you he lever and the other on the throttle, and you he lever and the other on the throttle, and you he lever and save her said." When he "had ten coaches behind him." or how he "threw her over "and "gave her the air." or "squealed for brakes." when he faced a headlight or abot off a broken rail. And all these efforts had their just financial recompense. He was making and saving money, he said, and when they were married, they would go South to live.

Now the troitible began, because the owner of the mission did not like Gallagher. But the young man's success led him to make stratured movements against the enemy's flank. He lad suit to firs. Bennett and won. Up to this time he had been obliged to meet Lulu at the mission or wherever he could. Their meetings were not frequent, for Gallagher had only Fridays and alternate Bundays to devote to lovemaking. His other days were given to his engine. But when he captured fars. Bennett callagher visited Lulu at her home and under the eye of her mother. Clandestine meetings were nivel up, but the young folks still went to the mission.

And there the first cause of the old man's flishle is found. Gallagher was a worshipper at the meetings were tived up, but the young folks still went to the mission.

And there was not slow to give ery happy. Gallagher is 22 and Luliu almost engineer said he lived in the Washing-sis at 122d street and Seventh avenua, y there revealed a state of things which slized the good mission man. He dis-d that Gallagher was a more janifor's n, an assistant, ash, carrier, a shoveller. fireman, an assistant, ash, carrier, a shoveller, and a liar.

Then Mr. Bennett asserted himself sgain in his own home, and his obedient daughter sent a mitten to her suitor by mail. That was on Friday a week ago. That night Gallacher took his bright revolver and the girl's letter and went to her home. All lovers who have quarrelied and "made up" again know what followed. At first she was firm and he despairing. At last, when he could endure it no longer, he put his hand in his pocket and eintohed his revolver.

"There's one way to settle all this agony. Lulu," he said, and taking the big revolver from his coat pocket he transferred it quickly to his hip precket.

The flash of its nickelled barrel caught her om his coat pocket he transferred it quickly his hip pocket. The flash of its nickelled barrel caught here, and she screamed. Then there was a sea which ended in a reconciliation and sliagher went home. But Mr. Bennett was not sased. He went over to the East 126th street stion and reported the facts to the police. On Friday night Gallagher called again and e potent revolver was again in his pocket. Bennett was at the prission. So was Decive Rosa. Mrs. Bennett shewered Gallasser string. She was convinced of his perflay, and charged him with it at once. A loud alteration answed which reached the ears of Decive Rosa in the mission next door. He siked into the Bennett hallway, put his hand Gallagher's pocket and pulled out a 38-libre Remington revolver with four loads in Then he arrested Gallagher on a charge of trying onneedled weapons, and took him to made no complaint. The detective told the story of the arrest, and Galiagher was held in $300 ball for trial.

Adelightful blush crept over the girl's cheeks yesterday afternoon when she told a $000 reporter the story:

"He did not threaten my life," she said. "I would go to court and swear that he did not." and from her carnest manner and the tremolo notes in her voire it was evident that Gallagher's lovemaking was not all in vain. She was anxious to know what had been done with him, and followed the reporter to the door to make what the penalty was for his act.

Gallagher himself told an ingenious story. He admitted that he had lied about his condition, and he said had "made a fool of himself "about the revolver. He was inclined to justify his romanding by quoting." All's fair is love. The revolver, he said, belonged to his brother, who lives on Staten Island, and he was on his way to return it when he called on Lulu. He was only shifting the weapon from one pocket to another, when she saw it and screamed. He was too late to go to Staten Island, and on last Friday he took the revolver gasin and called on the way to the ferry.

Odd Nesting Place for Mice. HAMMONDSPORT. Feb. 14.-Ex-Supervisor

Adsit Bailey of this town keeps a good many sheep on his farm, two miles from Hammondsport. The other day he went out to feed his flock, when he noticed a black spot on the back nock when he noticed a black spot on the back plone of his sheep, which disappeared while he was looking at it. He made a closer examination, and was amazed to see three piles come from somewhers down in the sheep's thick coat of wool, jump to the ground, and scamper away. The farmer put his hand down into the wool and found three snug and down into the wool and found three snug and gosy miles nests, such with a new-born litter of young ones in it. The mouse colonies were broken up. Bimilar opes were found to the warm fleeces of three other sheep in the flock. The sheep didn't seem to mind it.

A Norwich Broker Short in His Accounts. Norwich, Conn., Feb. 14.—A small irregularity has been found in the accounts of John E. McGarry, a Norwich broker, who has been the accepts, a Norwich broker, who has been the manager of the local branch office of W. L. Pation & Co. of New York for the past ten years. McGarry used the deposits of local customers to cover his losses in speculation. He is short in a sum estimated from $1.800 to $0.000. Mr. Pation of the firm is here and will bay the losses of local oustomers. The branch office will continue to do business here under a new manager. The hearing in the Cowie-Gibbs contested ase was continued yesterday at the rooms of the Union Republican Club of the Thirteenth Assembly district. Lawyer Tinsdale, for Cowie, called a number of witnesses to prove that at the primary on Jan. 14 fraud and in-timidation were practiced by the Gibbs fac-tion. M. E. Carmichael testified that he stood in line with a Sprague ticket. The line searcely moved. Men behind him were taken out and conducted to the ballot box. He complained to the inspector and was told that he probably had the wrong ticket. He was then taken out had the wrong ticket. He was then taken out of the line and presented with a Hamilton ticket, but he did not vote.

Leon Williams testified that he stood in line an hour. The line did not move an inch. He saw ten other men behind him conducted to the ballot box. William Hall and John Weynaut gave similar testimony. Be did John Hyer, a Custom House inspector, He was asked by Lawyer Porcher, counsel for the ex-Wicked, how he happened to be at the primary at 2 o'clock in the alternoon and not at the Custom House, but he did not ex niain. John McLivaine testified that he saw Michael King vote on the name of another man. The witness was asked what his occupation was.

"I work for my father." he said.

"What does your father do?"

"Nothing," the witness replied.

Daniel Carter testified that six men who voted were on the Tammany General Committee and that twenty-one men voted who did not live at the residence given.

The Ever Wicked tijbs was present smiling and chipper. At 5 o'clock the committee adjourned to 8 P. M. on the 25th.

Changed His Mind After He Took the Henry Smith is a peddler who lives in Eighth two children. His business has been poor of late, and to add to his troubles a man he sent out to peddle a load of oranges for him last Tuesday sold the fruit and disappeared with tective Ross in the mission next door. He walked into the Bennett hallway, put his hand in Gallagher's pocket and pulled out a 38-calbre Remington revolver with four loads in it. Then he arrested Gallagher on a charge of carrying concealed weapons, and took him to the station house, where he was locked up for the night.

Yesterday he was arraigned before Justice Divver in the Harlem Police Court. Luin was not present, but her father was, though he made no complaint. The detective told the story of the arrest, and Gallagher was held in 310 ball for trial.

Adelightful blush crept over the girl's cheeks yesterday afternoon when she told a Suv restricts upon him, and Saturday found Smith with but little money in his pocket. He went to Patrick J. Blake's saloon at 2,737 Eighth avenue, and called for a glass of sode water. He empiled a quantity of rat polson into the sod water and drank the mixture. He promptly repented and said he wanted to live. An ambulance was called from the Manhattan Hospital. Dr. Purdy pumped the polson out of the would-be suicide, and Smith was locked up in the Washington Heights police station.
